

Belize Bridge Structure Thailand

Article Overview

There is no public bridge named "Belize Bridge" in Thailand; the closest notable bridge is the Thai-Belgian Bridge in Bangkok.

Thai-Belgian Bridge Overview

The Thai-Belgian Bridge was inaugurated in 1988 at the Witthayu-Rama IV intersection in Bangkok to address traffic congestion and symbolize diplomatic friendship between Thailand and Belgium . Belgium supplied the pre-fabricated steel structure, while Thailand handled assembly and installation, making it Bangkok's first modern flyover bridge . The bridge's design allowed for rapid construction and cost efficiency, setting a precedent for future elevated roadways in the city . It became an iconic part of Bangkok's urban landscape, integrating into the daily commute of residents . The bridge suffered fire damage in 2015 due to a garbage truck accident, leading to partial dismantling and discussions about restoration or replacement . Its structural significance lies in its steel flyover design, which was innovative for Bangkok at the time and demonstrated international collaboration in civil engineering .

Clarification on "Belize Bridge"

The term "Belize" in the web results also refers to the Belize 66 Daybridge, which is a luxury yacht model designed by 4D Designs in collaboration with Riviera and Belize teams . This is unrelated to any bridge infrastructure in Thailand and should not be confused with public road or rail bridges....
