

Busline Milling Machine Price

Article Overview

Busline milling machines typically range from a few hundred dollars for small hobby models to tens of thousands for industrial CNC or heavy-duty machines.

Price Ranges

- Mini or benchtop bus milling machines: These are compact, hobby or educational models suitable for small workshops. Prices generally range from $300 to $1,500, depending on motor power, spindle speed, and included accessories .
- Manual industrial bus milling machines: Larger vertical or horizontal manual mills for metalworking can cost $5,000 to $20,000, depending on size, precision, and material handling capacity .
- Used industrial milling machines: Prices vary widely based on age, condition, and specifications. For example, used machines with large travel distances, high spindle power, and digital readouts can range from $2,000 to $15,000 or more .
- CNC busbar processing machines: High-end machines for punching, cutting, bending, and milling copper or aluminum busbars are more expensive, often $30,000 to $100,000+, reflecting automation, precision, and production efficiency .

Factors Affecting Price

- Machine Type: Vertical vs. horizontal, manual vs. CNC, and single-purpose vs. multi-purpose machines.
- Material Capability: Machines designed for heavy metals like steel or copper are more expensive than those for soft metals or plastics.
- Size and Travel Distance: Larger machines with longer X, Y, Z-axis travel and higher table load capacity cost more....
