

Mobile fiber optic cable connected to router shows a red light

Overview

This guide walks through seven easy methods to troubleshoot a red router light and get your connection working again, from checking service status and cables to restarting equipment, updating firmware, resetting the router, and knowing when to contact your ISP. A red light on your router usually means the device has lost its internet connection, is failing to authenticate with your provider, or has detected a hardware or service problem. In many cases, the issue is temporary and can be fixed with a few basic checks before you call support. When it's green and steady, everything is fine. This article explains the common causes, step-by-step troubleshooting methods, and when to contact your broadband provider to restore your internet. How to fix a Red LOS Light on your WiFi Router?

To fix a red LOS light on the router: Start by checking that the fiber or WAN cable is firmly connected and undamaged (no sharp bends or crushing), then clean the fiber connector if it looks dusty. Wait 10-20 seconds for it to fully power off.
