

Moroccan Bridge Construction

Overview

The construction of the bridge started in 2011, and the bridge was opened in 2016. It has a span of 376 meters and makes it the largest cable-stayed bridges in Africa. Its main purpose is to improve the viability of the Sidi Maârouf district, where six main arterial roads converge reaching a peak transit of more than 17. 000 vehicles per. Design, support for project management and detailed inspection. 30 m, it comprises a cable-stayed viaduct and an independent-span. As I was driving under a brilliant sun in a bright deep blue sky along the highways from Fez to Marrakech just east of the city of Rabat in Morocco, I crossed a bridge which I later found out that — at 950 meters in length with two arched towers which are 200 meters in height and symbolize the new.
