

Price of distribution box wiring box

Article Overview

The cost to correctly wire a distribution box typically ranges from $1,200 to $6,000 depending on panel size, amperage, location, and complexity of installation.

Cost Overview

For a standard residential setup, rewiring or replacing a 100-125A indoor distribution box usually costs $1,200-$2,500, including labor, materials, and permits. Larger systems, such as a 200A outdoor panel with a new meter socket, can reach $3,000-$6,000 due to higher capacity, weatherproof enclosures, and additional wiring requirements .

Factors Affecting Price

- Amperage and Panel Size: Higher amperage panels (200A vs 100A) and more circuits increase material and labor costs .
- Location: Outdoor installations require weatherproof enclosures and may involve more complex wiring, raising costs .
- Wiring Complexity: Longer wiring runs, rerouting, or structural modifications can add to labor expenses .
- Permits and Code Compliance: Local electrical codes, inspections, and permits can add 5-15% to the total cost, especially in urban areas .
- Material Quality: Steel or high-rated IP/NEMA enclosures, circuit breakers, busbars, and surge protectors influence pricing .
- Regional Labor Rates: Costs vary by region; urban West Coast areas tend to be higher, while Midwest or rural areas may be lower
