

Price of pigtail installation

Article Overview

Pigtail installation for aluminum wiring typically ranges from $500 to $6,000 depending on home size, number of outlets, and labor complexity.

Typical Cost Ranges

The total cost for pigtailing aluminum wiring varies widely based on the scope of the project. For a small home or limited number of outlets, costs often fall between $500 and $2,000, while larger homes with many outlets, switches, and fixtures can see totals from $2,000 up to $6,000 . Per-outlet or per-device costs generally range from $100 to $350, including materials and labor .

Key Cost Drivers

- Number of Outlets and Devices: More outlets or switches increase both material and labor costs .
- Labor Rates: Electricians typically charge $100–$150 per hour, with each pigtail connection taking roughly 10–20 minutes .
- Materials: Copper pigtails, AlumiConn or Copalum connectors, anti-oxidant compounds, and CO/ALR outlets are required. Connector costs range from $2–$5 each, while specialized systems like Copalum are more expensive .
- Panel or Circuit Upgrades: Adding AFCI/GFCI protection or upgrading panels can increase costs .
- Accessibility and Complexity: Homes with difficult access to wiring, older metal boxes, or long runs may require more labor and time .
- Permits and Inspections: Local codes may require permits and inspections, adding $200–$500 to the total
